

About In Due Season

In Due Season is a non-profit, 501(c)(3) organization that provides educational, mental and spiritual support to men and women facing the challenges of infertility. The organization strives to increase awareness and implements health and wellness programs for youth and adults on a local, regional and national basis.

Initially established as a nondenominational, monthly support group for women in November 2002, In Due Season has since grown to receive its incorporation status in December 2006, and expanded its services reaching out to women and men across the world.

Its goal is to offer support, valuable information and educational programs to help individuals and couples make sound decisions in their journey to have children. The organization reaches out to the youth in an effort to provide support as well as identify and reduce risks associated with infertility.

In Due Season partners with doctors, financiers, researchers, mental health providers and other professionals/organizations to develop programming. The organization also strives to provide funding opportunities to help defray costs associated with medical treatments, adoption, mental health services, difficult pregnancies, and accommodations when coping with a loss.

All proceeds from this event will help In Due Season carry out its mission to help those facing the many challenges associated with family building.
